Note: Phonics Level D defines homonyms as “words that sound alike but have different meanings and usually different spellings.” We think this definition more accurately describes homophones, since true homonyms are actually spelled identically. The following graphic may help explain what we mean.

We'll leave it up to your discretion as to whether you would like to make the distinction between homophones and homonyms with your children at this age. However, you may want to be aware of it as you continue your grammatical studies in the future.
